When I ask 'about heart attack' to my music enthusiast friend, she starts talking about Trey Songz.

When I ask a heart surgeon the same question, the version is totally different.

When I ask my bereaved friend, the version is another.

Same question, completely different answers. Vastly different perspectives. Still, am at ease receiving them - when I afford them the freedom-to-answer.

As a leader, do I afford this 'freedom-to-answer' to every question that I ask (others)?

Judging

Whether to judge the 'intention' or the 'outcome'? Or both?

As a leader, when I judge myself, which one do I use normally?

Is it the same when I judge others?

The task of the leader is to get his people from where they are to where they have not been - Henry Kissinger.

Pertinent.

For a leader himself, it's a journey to explore, going beyond known experiences!

Right things

Often we get occupied ensuring we do 'things right'.

Also relevant is to see, ensure we do the 'right things'.

Could I get both of them right next time?

Every time?

When you become a leader success is all about growing others - Jack Welch.

Growing others - while at that, demonstration helps.

Walking the talk, Aligning thoughts, words and actions, Being the authentic self - So relevant in the journey.

Being good

Being good leads to looking good.

But, being good need not be for looking good.

Learnings

Setbacks may happen - professional, personal.

What also happen with each of them are learnings.

Let's look for it.

Let's not miss it.

Organisation culture - takes time to set-in. Once set, normally outlives the Leader who has been instrumental in creating it.

Invisible, yet felt by all - every moment.

Organisation culture - a key aspect to actively nourish, nurture, work-on.

We spend a lot of time thinking and planning ‘what to do’.

Equally important is to think and plan ‘what to stop doing / what not to do’.

How much time do I invest on our strategic priorities?

On a daily basis?

Intriguing is the way 'other' priorities take over and crowd our day!
